A "yes" answer to any of the three questions above will not necessarily exclude you from consideration.

Under the Federal Statutes, an employer has the right to make reasonable pre-employment inquiries into your ability to perform job-related functions. Many of the job assignments for our employees require strenuous physical labor for sustained periods of time. The information you give below is for the limited purpose for our managers to determine your ability to perform those related functions and to determine reasonable job assignments for you. It will in no way exclude you from any job which you are able to perform.

Based upon the position you desire, is there any reason that you are not able to perform the duties required, with or without accommodation?
